Let's Ride

IT'S THE FEEL OF YOUR TIRES BITING INTO LOAMY SOIL OR THE BLISS OF A PERFECTLY APEXED TURN. It's that surge of energy you get as you crest an alpine pass or nail the best line through a rock garden. It's the sun on your skin and wind in your face as you sail past traffic gridlock. It's watching your kid take those first wobbly pedal strokes. It's the camaraderie of riding with friends, as well as the welcome solitude of riding alone. It's the light filtering through the leaves of autumn singletrack, or the way that, in the heat of the moment, every town-line sprint feels like the Champs-Élysées. It's the taste of a cold beer at the end of the trail. It's all of the beautiful moments that make up this life on two wheels. It's why we love what we do. So come on, let's saddle up. Let's have some fun. Let's make some memories. Let's Ride.

ELITE ROAD

FOR THE WIN

On the island of Tenerife, you go from sea level to 6,889 feet in less than 22 miles. Straight up the side of the volcano. Lungs crying. Heart pounding. This is thin air, altitude training in hell. With snow. Why suffer like this? Because the Giro d'Italia is three months away and its mountain top finishes take no prisoners.

THERE IS NO OFF-SEASON | Not when you are the youngest team on the World Tour and your aim is to shake things up at every race on the schedule. The Tour Down Under starts in January. The cold and wet Spring Classics rear their heads in February and pound you into gristle though April. Then, the big races begin in earnest. Hello, Giro. Hello, Tour de France. We are 30 riders from 15 countries, speaking 10 languages. Neo pros and vets. Classics and stage racers. What makes us a team? Digging deeper, relentless training and coming out on the other side of the season as one of the toughest teams on the World Tour.

CYCLOCROSS

ON ANY COLD SUNDAY

Cold, windy fields. Deep mud, roots, and sandpits as far as you can see. French fries with mayonnaise. Rabid fans with cigarettes and 9am beers. Punchy climbs, bottomless ruts, and wicked fast chutes. Run-ups and throw-downs. Bright scarves and cowbells. Pain and glory. This is Belgium. This is cyclocross.

This is the finest of Belgian cyclocross and the perfect test bed for the new SuperX.

XC RACE

IT'S TIME TO ADD ANOTHER X TO XC

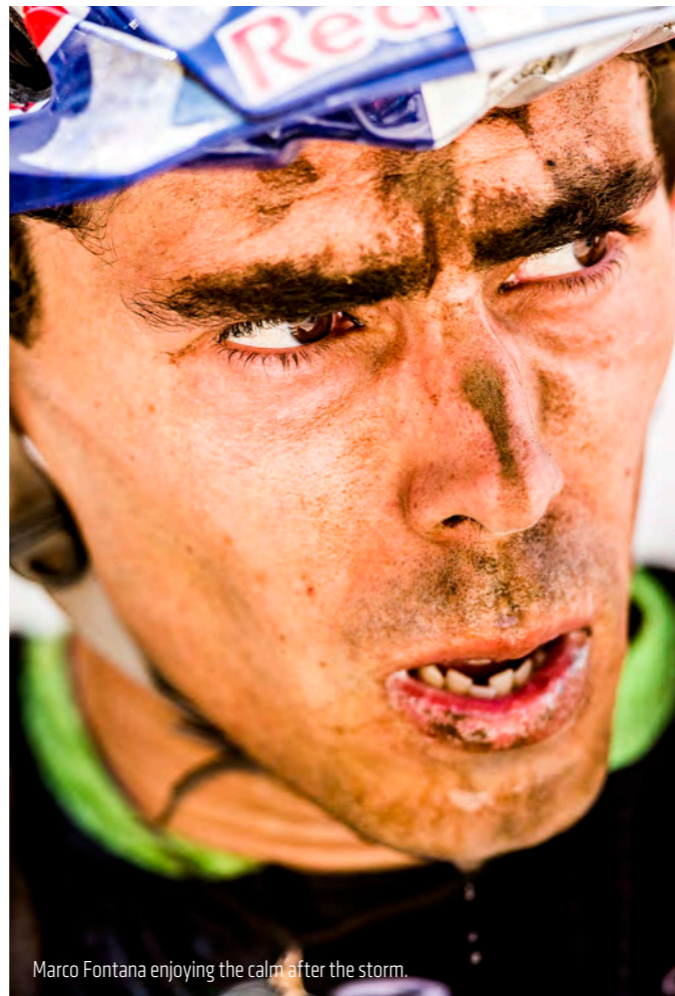

Today's XC courses are way more intense, with serious tech sections and hairball features you're more likely to find in DH. These are the kind of courses that don't require a bike. They require a weapon. A weapon that's ultra-light and as stiff as you'd expect – but designed with a lot more capability. For that extra X. This is exactly why we didn't build the F-Si and Scalpel-Si just for XC. We built them for XXC.

Manuel Fumic shows us what his zone looks like.

First big drop in the first big race. The Cairns XC course was definitely XC caliber.

Marco Fontana enjoying the calm after the storm.

This is what a Cape Epic stage win looks like.

SCALPEL-Si

BUILT FOR XXC

The ultimate race bike for the rough and tumble realities of modern XC. It's the lightest, stiffest XC dually on the planet, with radical new XC geometry to own the climbs, rule the descents and decimate the competition.

TRAIL

EXTRAORDINARY PURPOSE

Mark Weir is good at life. He made a habit of climbing more than a million vertical feet in a year, and is always ready to work harder, and play harder, than anyone you've ever met. He's ready to give you the shirt off his back, the last bit of food in his fridge and the best chicken in his coop. But Weir is most in his element, and at his best, when he's able to share trails with other mountain bikers – friends and strangers alike.

So, when a mix of mountain bikers were invited to join Weir for a long weekend of riding at his newly christened compound in Graeagle, California, they were a blessed bunch, whether they knew it or not. They understood that it wasn't going to be easy. This is Weir country, after all. They might've eaten sandwiches in the dirt but it wasn't a picnic. Wakeup calls at 4:00 A.M. to catch a glimpse of the rising sun were mandatory. So were half-mile hikes in the snow to "get to the goods."

Challenge accepted.

Looking bloody good.

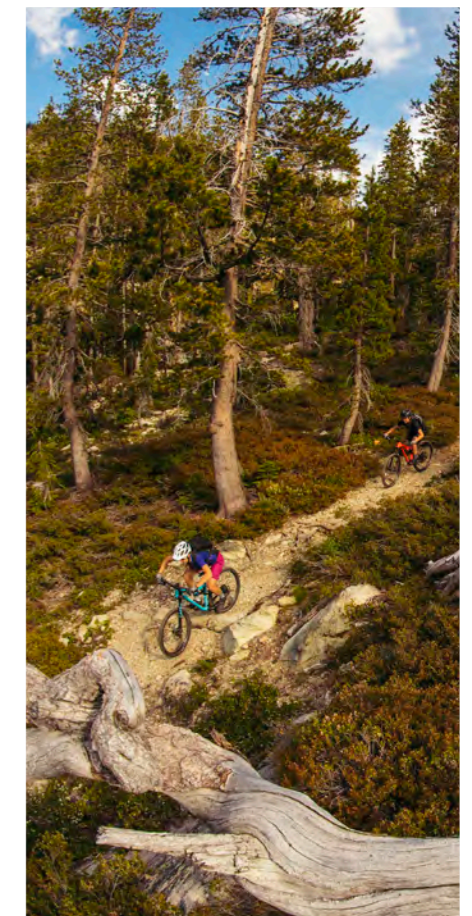

Loss prevention tactics were a must.

But winning at life requires extraordinary purpose. And the ability to share it with others. Weir has a refreshing outlook on sharing these epic places with others. "Never to exclude, just to carry the respect for the place. That's what makes me who I am everyday," Weir says. "These places are not here for us to keep close. They are here to share. Relationships are built on chance. I'm happy to know chance brought us together to share a place we all need to respect."

Not lost. Far from it.

Randy sends it into the late night hours.

Early to bed... You know the rest.

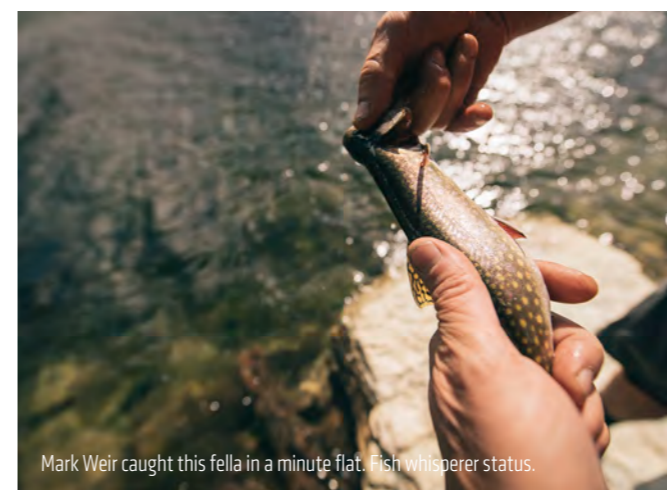

Mills Peak descent was the perfect way to end the weekend.

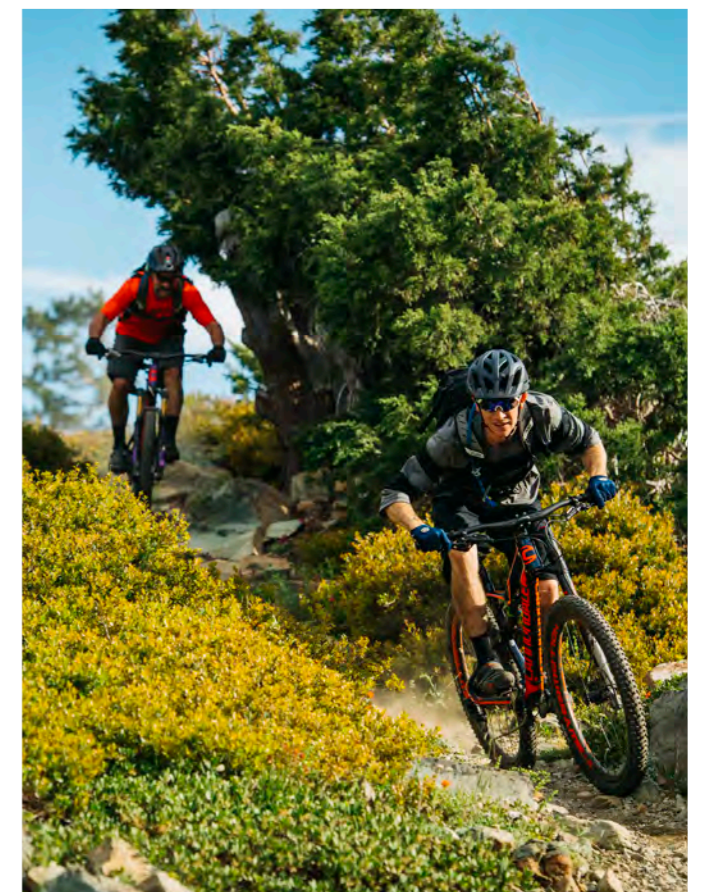

Count Cutty and his Co-Captain courageously carving corners and crashing.

After the end of our three day adventure in Weir's backyard we all know what he meant. One could certainly keep this all close. But where's the fun in that?

Mark Weir caught this fella in a minute flat. Fish whisperer status.

HABIT

GET INTO THE HABIT

We could have just called this bike the “sweet spot”. Composed and capable enough to run with bigger-travel bikes, yet light and lively enough to put the hurt on the shaved-leg set, the Habit is mainly concerned with delivering the most important kind of MTB performance – pure, simple, trail-ripping fun! If you’re looking for one bike to do it all, make it a Habit.

TRAIL

PILE OF ROCKS

You could call Elizabeth Furnace, Virginia, “rocky” but that’s just skimming the rubbly surface. The “small” rocks are angry softballs beneath our tires and they only get bigger from there – imagine a lumpy beachball...or VW bug. And roots? Oh yeah. These Civil War-era trails are just crawling with them.

In short, perfect terrain for our group of hooky-playing Cannondale engineers to enjoy some of the Plus-sized fruits of their labor. New Bad Habits and Beasts of the Easts are the order of the day, their 27.5x3.0 tires tailor-made for this sort of fun.

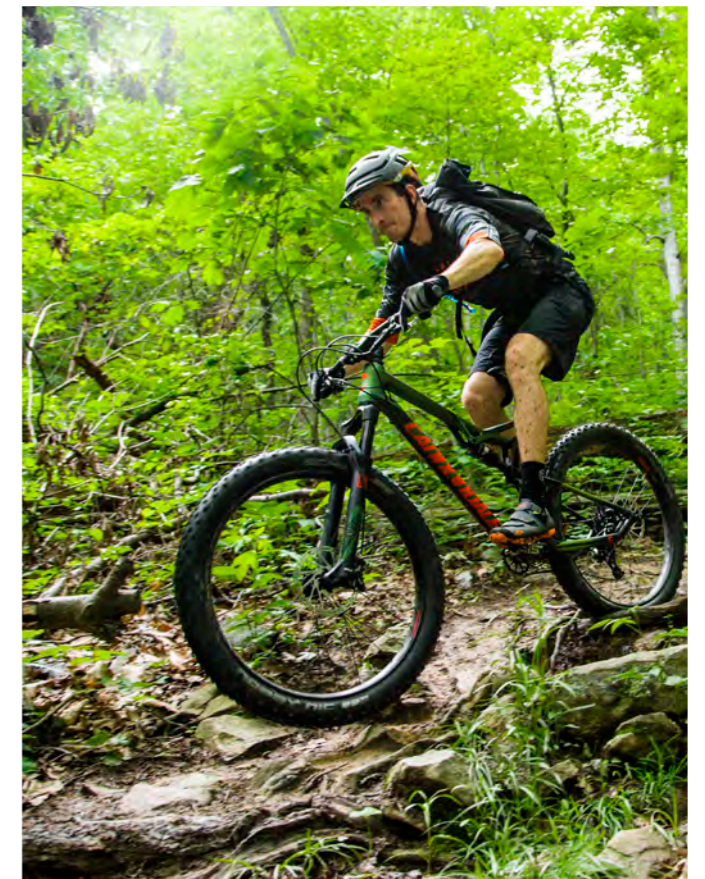

The climbs are a revelation – we grind up loose, chossy sections that would make for tough walking, and we can just throttle it. The limiting factor suddenly isn’t traction, it’s just the strength of our legs and our will. It’s unreal.

But, as if climbing these savage pitches isn’t reward enough, then come the descents. Ohhhh, the descents... If the climbs were revelatory, the descents...the descents are transcendent. The descents are sublime. The descents defy this writer’s vocabulary. They’re Christmas and Chanukah and Kwanza and Wing-Night Happy Hour rolled into one, and then some. We’re floating over the rubble and railing loose corners like never before, chasing each other and struggling to re-calibrate our brains’ hard won sense of where the limits are. There is much in the way of cackling and laughter.

THE MILES FLY BY, lost in a blur of grip and speed and defied expectations until we're back at camp; tired, sweaty and thoroughly exhilarated. Nothing to do but relax by the fire, enjoy some dutch-oven chili, frosty beverages and scheme on tomorrow's ride. More rocks? More roots? Hell yeah!

FAT BIKE

FORCES TO RECKON WITH

In the mountains, there's a palpable buzz as the air turns crisper and the sun sets sooner. To the uninitiated, winter's approach is dreaded as a time when the outdoor options narrow, when sliding replaces rolling and the soulful fun of singletrack is consigned to the memory banks to wait for spring. Nothing could be further from the truth. Nowadays this four-month window (fingers crossed) is a fattened feast of opportunity for those wanting to squeeze every ounce of enjoyment from dawn until dusk.

Ride. Glide. Or both.

Choose your days wisely. Choose your hours wisely.

Excuses need not apply.

BAD BOY

HOOLIGAN

URBAN

ROLL WITH IT

The pace of the city is not for the faint of heart. Surrounded by constant movement. The glow of lights. The buzz of technology and hum of world commerce. A city that never sleeps. Navigating an endless maze of streets. Amid the chaos, rolling along silently and efficiently, I feel the heartbeat of the city. The streets are mine.

I DON'T HAVE MUCH DOWNTIME | Living in the city, I'm always on the move and transit can eat up valuable hours of my day. Bad Weather. Trains behind schedule. Yellow cab shift change. Uber surge pricing. Snarled Traffic. Gridlock. I'm one of 8 million on the move from point A to B. From my apartment to my morning coffee to my WeWork desk to meetings uptown. Efficiency is key. Pedaling my Bad Boy down the bike lane. Floating over cobble streets and tucking into hidden alleys. Finding my own flow. Surfing the rhythms of the city. Time is of the essence.

FIVE BORO BIKE TOUR

For one day a year, bikes rule the streets of New York City. 32,000 cyclists. 5 Boros. 40 Miles. Completely free of cars.

An amazing way to experience the all-new Quick.

We set off on a brisk May morning. Through the canyons of Midtown and into Central Park. A Sunday stroll through Harlem. Soaring across the Queensboro Bridge into Queens. Skirting the Navy Yard and Dumbo in Brooklyn. Floating along the BQE as we fly across the Verrazano Bridge to Staten Island. A tight group of Cannondale folks, friends and journalists, all getting a fresh perspective on the city. Seeing it as never before, and in the best possible way. From the seat of a bicycle.

POWER LINES

I'M NOT SURE EXACTLY WHEN IT HAPPENED. I mean, I was never one of those “e-bikes are evil” hater-types. If I bothered to even think about them at all, I thought that if they get more people out from behind the clutches of their glowing screens and out feeling the rush of the trails and the beauty of the woods, well, that’s a good thing in my book.

But to me, e-bikes were for the other people. Don’t ask me what that means, I just (thought) I knew they weren’t for me. I’ve lived my life on two wheels ever since the training wheels came off and it’s always been about pushing myself - physically, mentally, seeing what I’m capable of, how much faster or further I can go. Having a motor just never really entered the picture.

Plus, the E-MTBs I’d ridden before were fun...but kind of not fun at the same time. Yeah, having all that power was pretty alright, but once the novelty of that wore off, it was just, well, it just wasn’t really riding. It was fun like strapping a Briggs and Stratton 2-stroke to a shopping cart is fun - great speed, but control...not so much.

BUT SOMEWHERE ALONG THIS TRAIL, somewhere along this *%&^ing sick, twisty, high-mountain monster of a trail we're testing this new bike on, I stopped thinking about the power, about the handling, the low center of gravity and all the other stuff the engineers told me about. I stopped being aware of the odd sensation of having to brake into uphill corners. I stopped thinking about the fact that I was on an e-bike. I stopped thinking, period. It was just. Pure. Riding. Pure rush. Non-stop action. Full gas everywhere. Every line, every corner, pure focus. Just breathing, heart-rate pinned. Uphill, downhill, blurring into one continuous flow, focused on the next section, then the next and the next. And it didn't stop. I think I love this thing...

A FINE LINE

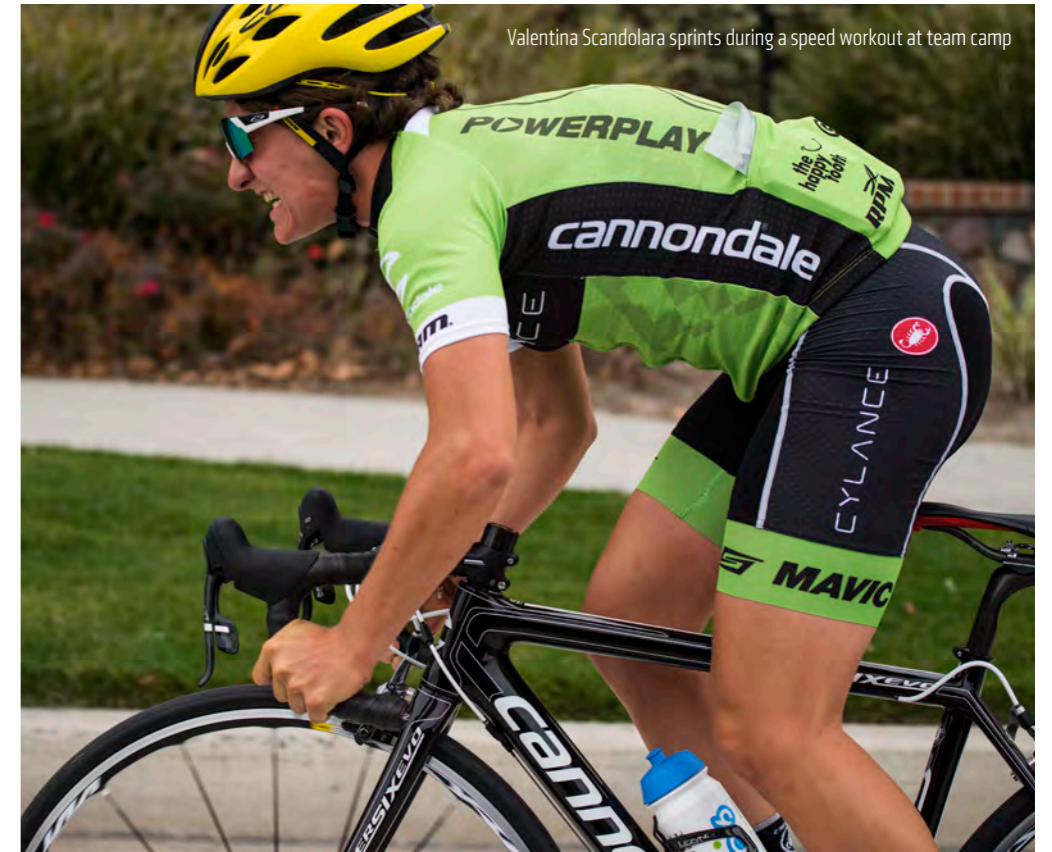

You don't always know your own finish line. We are chasing and building dreams on two wheels. Women, bikes, and a whole lot of grit is the perfect equation for Cylance Pro Cycling. We work hard, ride fast, and race on the UCI Women's WorldTour. Dedication is renewed daily through training, planning, and execution. We turn fear into courage, and remember to smile and enjoy the ride. We know the feeling of victory.

We also know the feeling of pouring your entire body and soul into a result only to come up short a few meters from the line. The bike teaches you that there is not only one finish line. Push past that line and achieve what you thought was impossible.

WOMENS XC

HARD FOUGHT

I started the final day of the 2016 Transylvania Epic with a slim lead, but I was determined to win the overall again. It was within my grasp, but this race across 174 miles of the rockiest terrain on the East Coast leaves a lot to chance. The week had been a struggle. I battled hard to gain the leader's jersey on Day 1, and then lost miles to a wrong turn and had to fight to get back to the front on Day 2. On Day 4, I crushed my rear rim and had to stop repeatedly to fix my tire in the pouring rain. The last day began with more rain and only a minute to second place. I forgot about everything else and pushed hard. My whole body ached, and the more my legs complained, the harder I worked. Two miles before the last aid I slipped on a wet off-camber rock. I thought I could bounce up and keep on, but the crash was worse than it should have been. I walked toward the last aid station and the rest of the field went by me in the rain. I heard myself cheer them on. These rocks and roots are not going anywhere, and I will surely be back to contend with them once more.

WOMEN'S TRAIL

FOREVER AND EVER

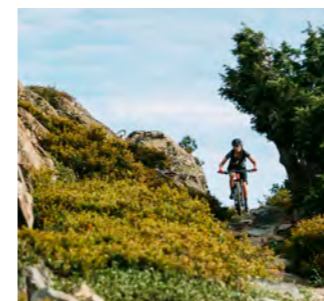

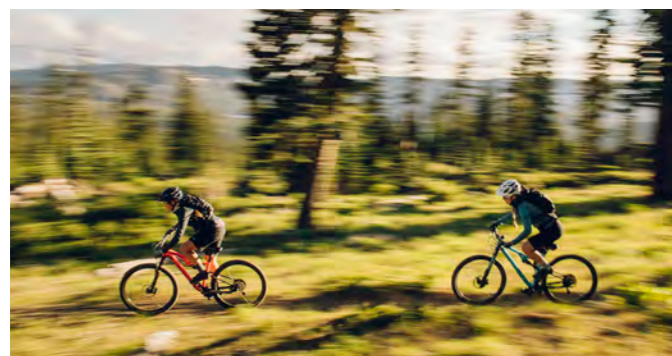

Flecks of glittering golden dust fly off of Campbell's rear wheel as she rounds the switchback in front of me. In the fading light, we wind our way down the narrow swath of trail toward the deepening blue of the lake below. A sun-soaked scent of mountain sage still warms the air, but there's a chill beneath it now: our breath becomes a little deeper, and the tips of our fingers start to tingle with cold. June in the high Sierras takes us out of our daily routine. We trade in a workweek for the relaxed rhythm of blue skies and pedal strokes, turns linked over rock-strewn mountain meadows, shale rocks clanking melodiously under our wheels as we drop from a pass, long days with nothing to do except ride and explore, and evenings spent relishing laughter and stories over cold beers and a warm fire.

Campbell Steers soaks in the last light of the day.

Maddie and Campbell navigate one of the many stream crossings found in the Sierras.

PASS IT ON

WE LOVE RIDING. It's the butter on our bread, the jelly to our peanut buttah, so, when we engineer our kids' bikes, we build them like we'd want, if we could go back in time and ride 'em ourselves. High performance bikes, with features and technology drawn straight from the bikes we're riding now. Bikes so light, so stable, so easy and fun to ride that they'll create a love of riding that will last a lifetime.

Around the office, we call these mini Cannondales "Heir-dales" because they really are engineered to pass something on to the next generation, something truly valuable...the love of the ride. Pass it on.
